Concerned about Racial Inequality?

A WORKSHOP FOR LEHIGH FACULTY AND STAFF WHO WANT TO DO MORE

In the last year, Charlottesville, border walls, travel bans, and more have offered almost daily reminders that the ideology of white supremacy is still supported by many, and racialized inequalities continue to pervade our government, family structures, and social and cultural institutions, including higher education. Many of us at Lehigh don't need convincing that something has to be done. But as scholars and teachers, what can we do?

You're invited to a special workshop that will bring faculty and staff together to develop creative strategies to address systemic racial inequality in our society and here at Lehigh. This workshop is intended for all interested faculty and staff, whether your research and teaching focuses directly on these questions or seems unrelated to them.

WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 7, 2018 4PM - 6:00PM / WILLIAMS HALL 070
